reason for being

Whilst Head of Clinical Quality Assurance for a global pharmaceutical company I frequently had a need to outsource clinical audits. I wanted to work with an independent QA group that could provide me with skilled and experienced resources when I needed them, and without any conflict of interest. At the time there were no such companies available, so I decided to set one up. Established in 1997, ADAMAS has a wide and varied range of clients, each with different needs. Our success comes from our ability to understand our client's requirements and provide them with a highly skilled and experienced team that is responsive, flexible and friendly.
